Carbon Covenant is a program that links faith communities in the Global North and South in a common commitment to curb global warming and help mitigate its impact on vulnerable people. Through carbon covenant relationships, Interfaith Power and Light congregations are supporting faith communities on the front lines of climate change impacts.

These faith communities are directly addressing the number one source of carbon emissions in the developing world: deforestation. They are protecting forests from illegal logging and poaching; promoting alternative, sustainable livelihoods; and reforesting degraded lands.

Join us in building solidarity with developing world faith communities, as they address climate change and build a sustainable future.

Project Details:

Help Buddhist Monks Prevent Illegal Logging in Cambodia

- Reduce illegal logging in the protected Monks' Community Forest through increased patrols
- Help ensure villagers benefit from the sacred forest
- Inspire others to conserve trees, the sacred "symbol of life," through their hands-on work
